

the career of the officer (qualification promotion) although promotion could be effected by the Co. in district only.

At the autumn and spring surveys he was a member of the Ministerial Supervision Committee.

He took care that the troops be continuously provided with didactic literature published mostly in the library of the Bordenland edition with political brochures with writing and propaganda material.

He kept the files on the personnel of the district ~~and the~~ ^{and the} statistical data (political leaning of the person, social descent, education, spiritual and physical capability, endowment etc.)

At the time of alarms and/or mopping up border-violations he was commander of one or other more important group.

District Chief of Staff

He was the immediate subordinate of the District Co. and made the orders ~~to the~~ ^{to the} carried out resp. carried them out without exception. As a rule he held the rank of a captain or major. He was the permanent deputy of the District Co. (In the absence of the District Co. it was not the political deputy who took over command)

He had to approve the organization of service of the Co. of the reserve company constantly supervised the interior service and the activity of the Railroad-control-group. He gave his orders to the Co. of above units.

He was superior in command the commanders of the Border Department, Training Department, Supply Department and Health Department but above co. did their work independently. The Chief of Staff could give orders to these commanders in connection with their activities but as these always tackled complicated problems practically they always took their measures independently.
